Keynote speakers: Santiago Carbo-Valverde, CUNEF (Spain) and Bangor Business School (UK), Thomas Chemmanur, Boston College (USA), Steven Ongena, University of Zurich (Switzerland), Anthony Saunders, New York University (USA), Gregory Udell, Indiana University (USA).

Just as the causes of the financial crisis were many and varied, so were its consequences. In Europe risk sharing among member states should increase – whether through financial markets, deposit guarantees or fiscal policy. Digitization of information has opened new opportunities also to financial services, which both incumbent institutions and new players are facing. Great benefits may be available, but new risks may also emerge. In the last decade, the banking system underwent deep changes but the question is whether it changed enough to face old problems and new challenges.

JFMMI 2019 conference brings together five top scholars in the field of banking and finance featuring a panel discussion for exchanging of research results and practical experiences ten years after the collapse of Lehman.
